

From Alberta's rolling plains, over the magnificent Rockies, through mighty rivers and the pristine Great Bear Rainforest—we are spoiled with the natural beauty and thriving ecosystems of the North. However, all of this is at risk. At risk of being spoiled by the proposed Enbridge Northern Gateway Pipeline project which threatens the lands, ecosystems, cultures and communities of the north with pipelines and oil tankers carrying crude bitumen for export to Asian markets. Explore the Tar sands to the Great Bear Rainforest through a beautifully enigmatic series of photography, film and renowned filmmakers, adventurers and speakers from the Gitgaa't First Nation, the International League of Conservation Photographers, and Pacific Wild. This evening will draw attention to what's at stake—the social, environmental and economic implications of the proposed pipeline and tankers project.
